PROFILE

My years at the University of Chicago were primarily focused around studying Political Science while pursuing my own interests in investing. After graduating, a close mentor suggested I try working in a sales role as I found finance less and less enjoyable. Despite my quick success in sales, I always found myself most interested in what the engineers were building. I decided to take the dive and began learning web development full-time. I am currently attending the Accelerate Coding Bootcamp in Hong Kong as a result.
